From Rabbi Holtz's Study

Dear Friends,

We are right in the middle of the traditional spring event known as the "Counting of the Omer" which we have reimagined as EverylCounts. We count the period of fifty days which begins on the second night of Passover, and ends at Shavuot, using as our counter the omer, the barley sheaves (barley is the first spring grain harvested in Israel). Most holidays are "stand-alone events, but there is an important and intimate connection between Passover and Shavuot.

Passover is the beginning of the Jewish people as a nation. The Haggadah tells us that our ancestors (Jacob and family) went down to Egypt few in number and became there a nation, "great, mighty and numerous." However, we truly became a distinct nation, only upon our redemption from slavery.

And yet, what kind of nation were we? The truth is that we were simply a conglomeration of people, perhaps even including Egyptians, having little to bind us together. It is not until Shavuot that this large and motley crowd becomes a nation with a unique destiny. It is then, standing at Mt. Sinai, that we received the Torah, God's unique set of instructions for the Jewish people.

Passover is incomplete without Shavuot. Freedom is incomplete without rules. The two are inextricably linked, and so in order to make sure we remember that connection, we are commanded to count the days between the two holidays. It is a forty-nine day journey which takes us to the completion of the story we begin reading at Passover.

This year Shavuot begins the evening of June 11. I'm telling you this in May so you have time to change your other plans! It is customary at the time of the revelation of the Torah to do some learning, say a few prayers, and eat dairy foods (in anticipation of entering the "land flowing with milk and honey). This year, we are doing all three!

We will be offering several different learning/discussion opportunities, all connected to themes of the holiday. We'll have a brief service, and then we will celebrate with cheesecake, cannoli and ice-cream! It

The antidote to the rise in antisemitism in the United States seems to be an abundance of Holocaust-themed plays, books, and movies emerging in contemporary popular culture. As we prepare to commemorate Yom HaShoah at the beginning of May, I wanted to give a quick overview of two Broadway shows and a novel that tell moving stories connected to the Holocaust and the historical abundance of global antisemitism. The two plays I'll be talking about have since closed, but they represent public offerings of awareness to issues that have and are still affecting Jews across the globe. Perhaps next time they will run even longer so that their poignant message that "never again is now" reaches an even wider audience.

Harmony: A New Musical by Barry Manilow and Bruce Sussman:

Harmony tells the true story of the Comedian Harmonists, a singing group of six young men that soared to popularity in Germany throughout the 1920s. It was haunting to see the gradual devolution of Jewish hatred in Nazi Germany. Three of the singers were Jewish, and a fourth was married to a Jew. At first, the group received special protected treatment as a result of their fame. Eventually, their prominence didn't matter anymore – the unabashed hatred for the Jews took precedent. The Nazis would not let them perform any music by Jewish composers. Eventually, they were banned from any public performance, at which point the group disbanded. Although all of the singers survived the war, the ensemble never regrouped.

Although the Broadway production closed in February, the soundtrack is a worthy homage to the depiction of Judaism and Jewish identity on Broadway. Of particular note is the song "Where You Go" which is sung by two of the Comedian Harmonist wives. Mary, a Jew-by-choice, is the wife of one of the singers in the group. She sings passionately about her devotion to her husband and her faith, in spite of the struggles the Jewish people are facing. Ruth, a Bolshevik freedom fighter committed to her Jewish heritage, sings bitterly to her husband who begs her to give up her mission or to leave Germany. The lyrics come from the Book of Ruth. This reminds us of the very words spoken by the very first Jew-by-choice her commitment to her faith and family. The women singing this text amidst the darkest of times for Jews affirm their own commitment to the same ideals as their Biblical ancestor.

Harmony – and the song "Where You Go" in particular – remind us that we have come so far in terms of combatting antisemitism – yet we still have a long way to go. Jewish resilience can be credited largely to our faith and our ability to stand up for justice. By framing the Comedian Harmonist's story as a flashback, Harmony is a beautiful yet heart–wrenching depiction of a devastating time for the Jewish people – and yet, we are still here.

promises to be a wonderful evening of celebrating the moment our ancestors accepted the Torah. It was a gift to the Jewish people, and though we reinterpret it in each generation, it remains the core of our faith. As every one of our b-mitzvah students declares from the bima, "In this scroll is the secret of our people's life from Sinai until now. Its teaching is love and justice, goodness and hope. Freedom is its gift to all who treasure it."

Please join us on Tuesday evening, June 11 at 7:30pm for Shavuot, as we eat, pray, study – and reaffirm our faith.

L'shalom, Rabbi David Holtz

Prayer for the French Republic by Joshua Harmon:

Prayer for the French Republic follows multiple generations of a Jewish family living in France. It simultaneously tells present day stories while depicting flashbacks to their ancestors living during the 1930s and 40s. During the Holocaust, the family's elders were lucky enough to stay put in their Paris apartment because their landlord protected them from Nazi deportations. But not everyone in the family was safe – some of their children were sent to Auschwitz, and only one son and a grandson returned.

Back in the present: Molly, an American, is spending a semester of college abroad in France but not in Paris because of her parents' worry about the possibility of "terrorism" in a major European city. She ends up spending most weekends in Paris regardless, after she connects with her distant cousins, who are the descendants of the Shoah survivors depicted in the flashbacks. Antisemitism still runs rampant in France even in the modern day, with Molly's cousin Daniel being attacked for outwardly displaying his Jewish identity by wearing a kipah. Daniel's father, Charles, makes a serious pitch to move the family to Israel – the only place where it feels safe to be Jewish. His wife, Marcelle is hesitant to make the move. After all, her family had lived in France for generations. She struggles to figure out whether being Jewish or being French factored more into her identity. Meanwhile, it becomes clear that Molly, like many young American college students, is an anti-Zionist who believes that Israel is responsible for Palestinian genocide. Her cousin, Elodie, tries to set her straight in a powerful monologue during the play's second act, dismissing Molly's naivete and encouraging her to look beyond her sheltered American world.

The play, which was written in 2022 and takes place in 2016, resonates particularly strongly in the wake of October 7. It reminds us why Israel exists in the first place. But, of course, it also begs the question – if Israel is the safest place for Jews, are we really safe anywhere? Overall, Prayer for the French Republic raises poignant questions of Jewish verses natural identity that resonate strongly amidst the challenges facing Jews of our generation.

We Must Not Think of Ourselves by Lauren Grodstein:

Unlike theater, books don't have limited runs. You still have the opportunity to read We Must Not Think of Ourselves by Lauren Grodstein, a historical novel about the Holocaust that gained national attention when it was chosen as the Today Show's "Read with Jenna" pick for December 2023. The story depicts an underground group called "Oneg Shabbat" whose purpose was to document the lives of the Jewish occupants of the Warsaw Ghetto in World War II so that their stories were not lost to history. It's a fairly light read – which seems odd for a story related to the Holocaust. Perhaps this fact, combined with its exposure on Today will the pathe stories – albeit fictional – of the Jews crowded together in the Warsaw ghetto reach a new audience. With hate and antisemitism, we need as many people as possible to hear about and know our stories so that such travesties never happen again.

STESSA PEERS DIRECTOR OF EDUCATION AND YOUTH ENGAGEMENT

Ten months seems like forever when you start a year. Children look toward summer as if it is an eternity away. And yet, we are somehow at the Siyum, concluding or closing, of our year 2023–2024/5783–5784. This year was filled with learning, joy, friendships, mitzvot, and middot (Jewish values), and I am so proud (and in awe) of our amazing education team!

I am also excited to OFFICIALLY share with the whole congregation that I am one of this year's Jewish Education Project's Young Pioneers Award Winners! The Robert M. Sherman Young Pioneers Award celebrates five Jewish educators aged 40 and under who demonstrate a commitment to new ideas and the use of innovative approaches to inspire children and families in their community. I am so proud that not only was I nominated by our community (and members in our community), but that I was chosen among so many incredible educators to be recognized in the entire area!

I am so excited to continue learning and growing with you and your families. TBA's school's amazing reputation continues to spread, and I cannot wait to see what next year holds for us!

Next year seems so far away still, but registration will soon be open and the next school year's calendar will be soon finalized (and out to you all soon!).

I would be remiss if I did not mention our end of the year picnic, a day of gratitude, after the last day of Sunday School on May 19th! It will be a day of fun, Jewish joy, and community, and I cannot wait to see you all there!

I am so thankful to you all for entrusting us with your children's Jewish education; we know just how important it is and are so excited to continue next school year!

L'Shalom! Stessa

We often say that art imitates life. By depicting the reality of rising antisemitism through theater and literature, we heighten our awareness of the harsh realities of the struggles contemporary Jews are facing. May we one day reach the day where such depictions of antisemitism are memory as opposed to current events.

As many of you know, I traveled to Israel in March with The Jewish Education Project (TJEP) to understand post-October 7 Israel and to gain some tools to educate our students and community within this context. We also grappled with antisemitism and how it is affecting us on a more global level.

We were a group of approximately 30 people: 23 Jewish educators from different walks of Judaism – Orthodox, Conservative, Reform – educators, rabbis, and leaders of Jewish organizations such as the ADL and PJ Library, along with guides and four people from The Jewish Education Project who helped run the program. Several board members, including David Bryfman, TJEP's CEO wove in and out of our time together. Our guides were indispensable in helping us to understand and deal with the trauma. Back home, we continue to work together, to learn, and support each other.

In a little more than three days together, each member of our group became witness to, and vessels for, understanding and digesting some of the many places, communities, and events that helped shape the current Israeli psyche. We visited places of terror (Nova, the site of the music festival; Kibbutz Nir Oz; Ofakim), a hotel housing מְּבוּנִים—mefunim, or evacuees; Har Herzl, Israel's National Cemetery; and spoke with countless other eyewitnesses and people on the ground. This is but a small sampling of what we did.

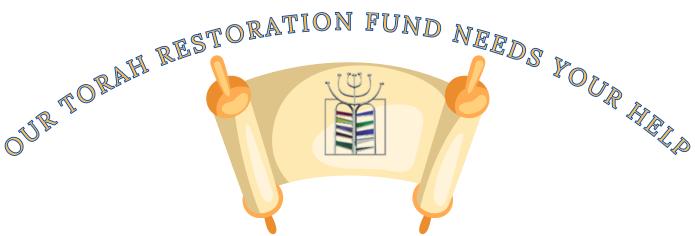

Throughout the trip, we stopped to reflect together and individually. The first goal was to embrace our emotions and internalize the drama and history that was unfolding. The second was to share ideas about how to move forward to bring all that we saw, heard, and learned into our classrooms with the proper framing for our students. For me, as well as for others, a third goal was to bring our experience to our entire community.

I plan to present my journey to my colleagues in our Religious School and work with them to find appropriate ways to teach our children. I am preparing lessons to share my experiences and look forward to further conversations with my fellow educators about how to reflect on this difficult history.

I look forward to making a presentation to our community on Wednesday evening May 1st, at 7:30 PM, here at Temple Beth Abraham. This program will be interactive as well as informative, helping us all to recognize where each of us stands, as we also work to understand and move forward. Not only will I share my thoughts about what I saw and experienced, I welcome you to share your thoughts, as well. I hope you will join me.

In his bulletin article Rabbi Holtz highlighted the centrality of the Torah for the Jewish people. While the words of Torah can be printed in books, it is the handwritten scrolls ensconced in our arks which lend spiritual weight to the majesty of our tradition during services. All of our scrolls are checked regularly by a sofer (scribe) to ensure that both the ink and the parchment are in good condition. When a scroll needs any work done, the cost is handled by our Torah Restoration Fund.

Unfortunately, due to recent repairs, that fund has been depleted.

While we always want to have some money in that fund, there is a particular need at the moment. We have one scroll that needs $17,000 in repairs. This Torah scroll was donated and dedicated more than 30 years ago in memory of a beloved TBA member, Joseph Doctor. We have received a generous matching grant of up to half the cost of repairs, so your donations up to $8,500 will be doubled. And of course, any additional donations will help us replenish the fund going forward. As we prepare to celebrate revelation at Shavuot, we hope you can be part of the physical restoration of our scrolls! And in advance, todah rabah!
